1. The main theme of this lecture is:
   A. The influence of French on English
   B. The future of English
   C. The history of English
   D. The flexibility of the English language

2. Why does the author talk about the French words bouef and poulet?
   A. To demonstrate that French is more beautiful than German
   B. To give an example of English words that have been adopted by French
   C. To show that English is a mix of different languages
   D. To discuss how the French talk about meat.

3. Why does the author mention the word email?
   A. To contrast the flexibility of English with other languages
   B. To give an example of a common English word
   C. To show how technology has changed English
   D. To argue that languages should not adopt foreign words.

4. How does the professor demonstrate that English grammar has changed?
   A. By showing the influence of Chinese grammar on English
   B. By giving an example of a grammatical form that is no longer used often
   C. By teaching students how to use the subjunctive
   D. By asking students to think of an example of changes in grammar

5. Listen to part of the lecture again.

6. Listen to part of the lecture again.

Why does the professor say:
   A. To encourage students to talk about history
   B. To keep the focus on the English language itself.
   C. To make the point that Great Britain is a powerful country
   D. To give an example that is familiar to all the students

Why does the professor say
   A. He wants a student to give an example of the subjunctive
   B. He is highlighting an important theme of the lecture
   C. He wants to introduce a discussion of new English words
   D. He thinks it is an unfamiliar term